English 1302 Rigor Agreement

English 1302 is a college-level course. It, by definition, will move faster, be more rigorous in testing and grading, and will require considerably more study time outside the classroom than high school courses. The following list of study techniques is highly recommended for understanding the content of the course with the goal of demonstrating the content through discussion, assignments, and testing:

1. Study groups;
2. Extensive note taking;
3. Daily at-home review of notes;
4. Reading ahead;
5. Taking notes at home over the reading assignment;
6. Participating in class discussion;
7. Asking questions if you do not understand; and
8. Attending tutorials if you do not understand.

If you are not willing to undertake all of these suggestions, then expect to do worse (considerably worse) than your high school courses.

I have read the above statement, and I understand the above statement applies to me and my enrollment in English 1302.
